Sherlock Holmes Pilgrimage to Switzerland

9 to 16 September 2012

Since 1968 the Sherlock Holmes Society of London has organised pilgrimages to Switzerland's Bernese Oberland region to pay homage to their hero.

Although Holmes is more often associated with London, one memorable story, "The Final Problem", sees him travel to Switzerland where he falls to his death at the Reichenbach Falls near Meiringen.

Sherlock Holmes author, Arthur Conan Doyle visited Switzerland along with many other great writers, artists and composers. Drawn by the natural beauty, the Byron, Turner, Tolkien, Goethe and Mendelssohn all visited the Bernese Oberland during the 19th and 20th centuries.

From 9 to 16 September, fans from around the world will recreate a typical "Grand Tour" itinerary to the area. Dressed in period costume they will relive the Golden Age of European travel, art and literature.

Travel writers and journalists are invited to join the pilgrimage.

New Chilean 'Wine, Culture and Cowboys' Tour

Darwin's Trails, a joint English/Chilean Tour Operator is running a new special interest tour which combines wine-tasting in Chile's wine region, Santiago and an opportunity to learn about the traditional culture and skills of the 'Huaso' horseman.

This tour begins with a stay in the historic, bustling and cosmopolitan city of Santiago, nestled under the spectacular backdrop of the snowcapped Andes.

From here, a series of day trips take participants to Chile's Central Wine Valleys where they will sample wines, learn from world-class sommeliers and enjoy local cuisine and hospitality in beautiful haciendas and wine producing estates.

Chile's vineyards trace their ancestry back to 17th century Spain and are of global importance as they escaped the 19th century wine blight that laid waste to most of the Europe's wine producing industry.

Visit : www.darwinstrails.com. Darwin's Trails will be interested in considering press trip opportunities for Alliance members. Contact : Adrian Turner at aturner@darwinstrails.com.

Keats House, London

Poet John Keats lived in this house with his friend Charles Brown from 1818 to 1820, and this is the setting that inspired some of Keats' most memorable poetry.

Here, Keats wrote 'Ode to a Nightingale', while sitting under a plum tree in the garden; he fell in love with Fanny Brawne, the girl next door.

It was from this house that he travelled to Rome, where he died of tuberculosis aged just 25. The Heath Branch Public Library occupies the space where various outhouses once stood.

The library was opened on 16 July 1931, and displays some artefacts from the house, including the engagement ring Keats offered to Fanny Brawne and a copy of Keats' death mask.

Nevada

The ghost town of Rhyolite

The secluded Rhyolite is classed as one of the best ghost towns in America.

Situated on the eastern edge of Death Valley, a visit gives the chance to learn about the past of this once-booming town.

Rhyolite was established in 1905 as a mining town during the gold rush but was abandoned in 1920.

Since this time, no one has lived in the town. The general store, train station and bank still stand in the derelict town, but the most fascinating feature is the jail, where visitors can look out through the metal bars and put themselves in the shoes of past prisoners.

Rachel, the UFO Capital of the World

Located along the Extraterrestrial Highway, approximately 150 miles north of Las Vegas, this small town with just 100 inhabitants is a regular location for fans of UFO's stopping over to learn about the peculiar Air Force testing facility.

Like many of Nevada's town, Rachel was once a mining town which closed over 20 years ago.

The first UFO spotting was in 1989 and since then the town has been bustling with visitors.

Ghosts of the Mizpah Hotel in Tonopah

Situated between Las Vegas and Reno, the Mizpah Hotel was once home to miners during the gold boom in the early 20th century.

It is said to be have ghostly characters walking the halls. Rumour has it a politician died in the hotel before an important election- his death was hidden by his aides- it is believed they kept his body in a bathtub on blocks of ice.

The Genoa Bar

Known as "Nevada's Oldest Thirst Parlor", the Genoa Bar is the oldest in Nevada, and has been visited by a variety of famous faces including Mark Twain when he first reported for the Territorial Enterprise.

Presidents Ulysses S. Grant and Theodore "Teddy" Roosevelt enjoyed "cool ones", Clark Gable visited to play high stakes poker games with the local cattle barons.

Actress Raquel Welch reportedly took off her bra there and flung it into the rafters. It's still there.

Genoa is the oldest town in Nevada, and it was used as the set for the movie "Misery" with Kathy Bates and Billy Crystal.
